Marquette Bank Announces Personal Finance and Homebuyer Education Class Schedules for 2009

Orland Park, IL (January 23, 2009) – Marquette Bank, a locally-owned neighborhood bank, announces its Personal Finance Classes and Homebuyer Education Classes for 2009.

The educational program, entering its tenth year, offers free classes to meet the needs of neighborhood residents. Given the current economy, personal finance classes covering the basics of household budgeting, understanding credit scores and using checking accounts, are more important than ever. Homebuyer classes are also highly relevant in today's environment allowing participants to fully understand all aspects of the home purchasing processes.

Held on Saturdays, the two-part classes take place in the Marquette Education & Training Center, on the second floor, at the Bank's original building located at 6316 South Western Avenue in Chicago. The classes, open to anyone, mostly draw people from the neighborhoods Marquette Bank serves in Chicago and the nearby south and southwest suburbs.

"Marquette Bank enables people of all ages to establish positive banking and credit relationships," said Thomas J. Bamford, Vice President. "Over the years, experience has shown education is an essential tool in the Bank's effort to help area residents understand financial matters more fully. We firmly believe an informed consumer of financial services is far more likely to set and achieve financial goals. Reflecting this, all classes and learning materials are free of charge to participants."
